

The Wisconsin Union invites you literally to “Come to the Table” for a new series focused on food, sustainability, local and organic sourcing, biogenetic, policy, social justice and world trends in food consumption on Tuesday, November 3 at 6 pm in the Memorial Union. Check the “Today in the Union” listing for exact location.

This first edition of “Come to the Table” features Professor Michael Bell, Department of Community and Environmental Sociology and the Gaylord Nelson Institute for Environmental Studies, discussing "The Merchant is the One Who Gets it All: Food, the ‘middleman,’ and the Agroecology of Justice.”

The menu includes locally grown and made items including cream of mushroom soup with chive garnish, rosemary butternut lasagna, organic white beans, braised kale, Usinger’s Italian sausage, sourdough rolls and organic pumpkin pie with locally roasted coffee. There may be some substitutions.

Tickets are available at the Memorial Union Box Office. The cost is $7.50 for students and $12.50 for faculty, staff, Union members and community members.

This event is sponsored by the Wisconsin Union Directorate Society & Politics Committee and co-sponsored by F.H. King and Nelson Institute for Environmental Studies and the Wisconsin Union Dining Services.

For more information, contact Megan Lalor (608) 263-2458, lalor@wisc.edu, or visit www.union.wisc.edu/societyandpolitics.

Get involved with the WUD Society & Politics Committee! Attend one of the committee’s weekly meetings, Mondays at 7 pm at Memorial Union. Check TITU for exact location.